Nestled in a grove of Cottonwood trees along side of the Yellowstone River, the Smith's wanted to breath new life inot an old and tired ranch. We demolished some old structures, remodeled and added on to others and built new facilities as well. The buildings are tied together architecurally with materials, roof lines, and landscaping. The focal point of the entire site is an old 1800's barn that is the guest house. The 50' outdoor swimming pool with a 400gpm water fall is the primary landscaping feature that ties it all together. Much of the rock work was coordinated on site with the contrctor, placing large rocks per our direction.
